FRANK KRAMER IN SPILL

By JOHN G. ANDERSON.
At the present moment most of the golfin interest is centred in the past and present play of the professionals. To a greater degree than ever the pros have proved that they are the superiors of the amateurs, especially with regard to golfing style. There may be in the Metropolitan district a few who can match or even surpass the pros in their giving of lessons, but the average golfer is far from being able to do so. Almost every club which has a membership of 100 will provide enough members taking lessons to warrant the employment of a second professional capable of giving good instruction in golf.

Barnes Is Too Busy.

Take the case of "Jim" Barnes, for instance. He has been in almost every big professional event this year, beginning with the Southern championships and finishing in the Massachusetts, Connecticut, Metropolitan, Western, National, Van Cortlandt, Kenosha, Milwaukee-Pennsylvania, Philadelphia and other open events.

The most part golf as displayed by the older amateurs is individual, such as the long drive, and the putting and mashie taken by Max Marston, and whatever of success is gained is not due to stylistic golf. The methods and the will of the majority more often than not rule in this game, and what is granted as correct is that which has brought the best results to the greatest number of golfers with the least effort.

Learn From Professionals.

Correctness of style brings correctness of stroke, which gives near perfect results in shot making, and in the mashie shot for instance a short back swing will lessen the possibility of hitting the ball too far. And so it goes with the other professionals in order taking a short back swing and hitting the turf after they have hit the ball there is golf education abroad which is a wise move before a professional is employed by Barnes—not by the club—who would be paid $20 or $25 a week, and I feel sure that this would prove a paying investment, as the amount taken in for lessons would far exceed that.

I would like to say that out of a group of five months it has been necessary for the late Wittenham golfer to be absent from his club the major portion of two months, during which time there has been no one anywhere near his standard as a teacher to take his place. I am sure that Barnes, who was born a wise man if not a great golfer, would be a wise move if an amateur golfer.
